Mission and Learning Objectives

Students will be living together in a Service Learning Community of ministry peers seeking to develop their pastoral voice and leadership style in context of local church and chaplaincy environments. The communal mission for the students will be trifold: 1.) to imagine solutions for the declining mainline church, including developing a contemporary service under direction of the Pastor, Worship Leaders, and a Special Committee, 2.) to develop an existing chaplaincy with Hawaii's largest homeless services organization, the Institute for Human Services (IHS), 3.) to analyze the context of Christianity in historically colonized settings and its impact on the future of the Christian faith in practice. Students will be held in supportive discernment while they determine their ministry direction by a community that has years of experience guiding Seminarians through their pastoral calls, as well as having access to and education from a variety of professional pastors and chaplains. The declining church is the fact of life for mainline seminary students' future job prospects and has a huge impact on the durability of chaplaincy careers, as the funding and support for most chaplaincy jobs comes from local church facilitation. Further, Christianity in historically colonized contexts often operates differently than Christianity in majority Western contexts, and the nature of the globalized, post-colonial world will impact future pastoral job opportunities. This internship community is an exercise in preparation for the environment of ministerial job prospects in chaplaincy, local church pastorship, and international mission that students may face upon graduating from their theological institutions. Additionally, for students interested in international mission work, this is an enlightening environment to learn about Christianity in context of historically colonized populations. The learning objective of the community and its individual internships is to evaluate the connection between community chaplaincy, the local church, and international mission work, and imagine solutions relevant to students' future ministry careers.

Students will be expected to assist Sunday service and preach quarterly, as well as operate under professional supervision a contemporary night service ("Dinner Church") and community outreach for that service under the direction of the Pastor, Music Director, and the Worship Chair.

Students will be expected to accompany the Pastor on Fridays to IHS to do chaplaincy ministry with that population, and then take over doing independent engagement one other day of the week with the ministry. Students should also develop a strategic plan or learning assessment on if or how the local church and its worship services fit into the concept of chaplaincy or outreach ministry.

Students will be expected to take classes and provided readings on International Mission and Christianity in post-colonial societies will be expected to work in a combination of the above environments while integrating learning objectives concentrating on the history and contemporary context of Japanese and/or Hawaiian Christianity. Students will be expected to articulate by the end of their internship their learned perspective on theological and social contexts of native Hawaiians, Japanese, Filipino, and Micronesian immigrants to Hawaii, and their intersectional journeys through Christianization and colonization.

Goals of the Service Learning Community include:

- Developing the intern's pastoral voice as a leader in the Church and Community;
- Analyzing the intersection of community spiritual care with local church ministry;
- Navigating the decline of the mainline Protestant church and its impact on Chaplaincy opportunities;
- Understanding Christianity and its contextual practice in historically colonized and multicultural environments.

Weekly time commitments expected of interns (35-40 hours a week, with potential for revision based on student learning needs and objectives):

- 1 hour weekly professional guidance from the Pastor or rotation of guest Pastors;
- 1 hour weekly reflective journaling to be turned in to the Service Learning Committee;
- 2 hours weekly reflection dinner with the Service Learning Community and Committee of Kailua Christian Church;
- 1 hour monthly workshop with rotation of guest Pastors after the reflection dinner;
- 2 hours weekly researching church and mediating institutional decline and its effect on social service systems (reading materials provided);
- 2 hour weekly researching the effects of Christian colonization on indigenous and vulnerable populations, in particular common populations in Hawaii (reading materials provided);
- 10 hours a week planning, advertising, and executing a contemporary worship service for young families;
- 10 hours a week visiting and serving in a chaplaincy capacity at the Institute for Human Services (homeless shelters);
- Both missions at the church or the shelters should intentionally integrate knowledge of cultural practices into ministry work.
- All students will be expected to attend traditional Sunday worship service weekly and provide a testimonial summary for the congregation about their progress on a rotating basis (once every 6 weeks).
- All students will be expected to attend at least 1 Council and/or Deacons meeting to help provide leadership insight. Students will be provided space at those meetings to ask questions about the processes involved in church leadership.
- All students will be expected to preach for a worship service or teach a Christian Education class for the church once during their service.
- Students will be expected to take at least 2 trainings on Hawaiian history, culture, and spirituality.

Kailua is an affluent neighborhood of Oahu that, according to the census data, holds a low poverty rate and is highly residential. The demographics of Kailua Christian Church reflect the demographics of its surroundings in that we are a mostly middle class, ethnically Japanese community in the middle of a residential neighborhood. However, our demographics – as with most UCC churches in 2023 – are aging at a much higher rate than our neighbors. Part of the mission of the Service Learning Community is to reflect and address this problem appropriately in context of the student participants' intended pastoral or chaplaincy career.

Hawaii holds the unfortunate statistic of being in the top 5 US states with the highest per capita population experiencing homelessness in the country. The Institute for Human Services (IHS) is the oldest and largest homeless services company in Hawaii. With 3 emergency shelters, over a dozen respite and transitional homes, and a staff of 200+ dedicated homelessness specialists, IHS provides a robust environment for seminarians considering chaplaincy to serve and imagine their futures as professional chaplains in a social services environment. Pastor Irene Willis Hassan of Kailua Christian Church is the former Director of Chaplaincy for IHS, and Connie Mitchell, current Executive Director of IHS, is the former Associate Pastor of Kailua Christian Church. Our church has a long standing relationship with this organization and Pastor Irene continues to serve as volunteer Chaplain for them every Friday with intention to expand the Chaplaincy through ecumenical partnerships and the Kailua Christian Church Service Learning Community.
